

Sabine Hänsgen
Kaufhof Inspection
27.7.2026

Together with M. Hüttel, we carried out an inspection of the QR codes behind the fences at the construction site surrounding the Kaufhof building in Witten.

At the back of the building, Martin slipped behind the construction fence to photograph the QR codes on the window and to be photographed himself. He was wearing the bright pink baseball cap that Gisela had given him. Martin refused to scan the QR codes — he felt uncomfortable watching the videos while standing behind the bars. Maybe he will eventually watch the video "Buddha Head" at home — but that remains to be seen.

It was a big surprise for me that the QR code had reappeared on the front of the building. The day after it was installed, the QR code on the front façade had already been covered up, since the side facing Bahnhofstrasse is a very attractive spot for advertising and various announcements.

After the façade had been fenced off, not only did new posters stop appearing, but the first layers of the palimpsest gradually became visible again.

I'm curious whether Martin will end up writing something—perhaps with the title "The Old Man and the Void".

